

The Transmission and Influence of Modern Dance Somatics in Cross-cultural Artistic Communication

Wenrui Hu

Tongji University, 200092, Shanghai, China

1026522022@qq.com

Keywords: Modern dance body aesthetics; Cross-cultural communication; Global communication; Cultural differences; Strategies and suggestions

Abstract: Modern dance, as a unique body art form, plays an important role in cross-cultural communication under the background of globalization. This article aims to explore the spread path, influence, challenge and countermeasures of modern dance body aesthetics in cross-cultural communication. This article deeply analyzes the global communication path of modern dance from its birthplace to all parts of the world, reveals its practice of cross-cultural adaptation and integration, and the ways and effects of cross-cultural communication through international competitions, art festivals, online media and other channels. The results show that modern dance body aesthetics promotes cultural understanding and respect in cross-cultural communication, stimulates artistic innovation, enriches the diversity of global artistic ecology, and promotes public participation and social dialogue by expressing social issues. However, cultural differences and misunderstandings are still the main challenges faced by modern dance body aesthetics in cross-cultural communication. Therefore, this article puts forward some strategies and suggestions, such as strengthening cultural exchange training, innovating cooperation mode and using digital technology, in order to promote the more effective cross-cultural communication of modern dance body aesthetics.

1. Introduction

In the tide of globalization, the boundaries between countries in the world are increasingly blurred, and cultural and artistic exchanges have become unprecedented frequent and in-depth [1]. This trend not only promotes mutual understanding and respect between different cultures, but also provides a broad stage for the spread and innovation of various art forms. Modern dance, as a highly expressive, innovative and technical art form, has crossed national boundaries since its birth and has become a bridge connecting different cultures and people [2]. It occupies a decisive position in cross-cultural communication with its unique body language, diversified expression techniques and profound ideological connotation [3]. Modern dance is not only a medium for artists to explore their physical potential, express their personal feelings and social issues, but also a window for the audience to understand foreign cultures and feel artistic charm [4].

It is of far-reaching significance to study the spread and influence of modern dance body aesthetics in cross-cultural artistic communication. First of all, it helps to deepen our understanding of modern dance as a tool of cultural exchange, and reveals how it promotes communication and understanding between people with different cultural backgrounds through body language [5]. Secondly, as the core component of modern dance, the cross-cultural communication of body aesthetics not only enriches the global artistic ecology, but also stimulates artistic innovation and promotes the diversified development of dance art [6]. In addition, the spread of modern dance body aesthetics also helps to promote social integration, reduce cultural prejudice and barriers through artistic resonance, and contribute to building a harmonious multicultural society [7].

The purpose of this study is to deeply explore the transmission path, influence mechanism and challenges of modern dance body aesthetics in cross-cultural artistic communication, with a view to providing theoretical support and practical guidance for promoting cultural understanding, artistic innovation and social integration.

2. Overview of modern dance body aesthetics

Modern dance is characterized by free body language, diverse music choices and innovative dance structure, aiming at exploring the possibility of body, expressing personal feelings and social issues. Body aesthetics, as a branch of aesthetics, pays attention to the dual role of body as aesthetic object and aesthetic subject [8]. In modern dance, body aesthetics embodies that dancers create dance works with both visual impact and philosophical connotation through accurate action design, rich body language and profound emotional expression.

The core value of modern dance body aesthetics is that it conveys profound thoughts, complex emotions and important social issues through the dynamic expression of the body [9]. It challenges the traditional aesthetic concept, emphasizes the real feeling of the body and the release of personality, and provides a brand-new artistic experience for the audience. At the same time, body aesthetics is also an important driving force for the innovation of modern dance art, which encourages dancers to constantly explore the limits of their bodies, create unprecedented dance vocabulary, and promote the continuous development of dance art. Through body aesthetics, modern dance not only becomes a bridge between individual and collective, past and future, but also becomes an important force to reflect the spirit of the times and promote social progress.

3. The dissemination of modern dance in cross-cultural artistic exchange

3.1. The globalization path of modern dance

The globalization path of modern dance is a complex and diverse process. With the passage of time, modern dance gradually spread from its birthplace, and its transmission path mainly includes international tour, the flow of educators and dancers, and the promotion of international dance festivals and competitions [10]. In these processes, some key nodes such as new york, London, Paris and other international metropolises have become important hubs of modern dance communication, which not only attract dancers from all over the world, but also promote the exchange and integration of modern dance concepts and technologies. In terms of influencing factors, political, economic, cultural and other factors work together in the globalization process of modern dance.

3.2. Cross-cultural adaptation and integration

In the spread of modern dance, cross-cultural adaptation and integration is an important way to adapt to and influence local culture. When modern dance enters different cultural contexts, it often needs to be combined with local cultural elements, aesthetic habits and social issues to create modern dance works with regional characteristics. This adaptation is not only reflected in the design of dance movements, but also in music selection, costume props, stage scenery and many other aspects.

Through cross-cultural adaptation, modern dance can integrate new cultural elements while maintaining its artistic essence, thus enriching its expression and connotation. At the same time, this integration has also promoted the innovation and development of local culture and provided new possibilities for cultural diversity, as shown in Table 1:

Table 1 Examples of Cross-Cultural Adaptations in Modern Dance and Their Cultural Impact

Modern Dance Work Title	Original Cultural Background	Cultural Elements Incorporated in Adaptation	Effects and Impact of Adaptation
"Dance of the	Western Modern	Chinese Traditional	This work combines the fluidity and power of Western modern dance with the softness and rhythm of Chinese

East"	Dance	Dance Moves, Folk Music	traditional dance, creating a unique visual and auditory experience. This fusion not only enriches the expression forms of modern dance but also promotes the innovative dissemination of Chinese traditional culture.
"Soul of Africa"	Western Modern Dance	African Drum Music, Tribal Dance Elements	"Soul of Africa" merges the bodily language of Western modern dance with the intense rhythms of African drum music and the primal energy of tribal dance, showcasing the unique charm of African culture. This adaptation not only diversifies modern dance but also facilitates the global dissemination of African culture.
"Indian Fantasy"	Western Modern Dance	Indian Classical Dance Gestures, Traditional Costumes	"Indian Fantasy" combines the versatility of Western modern dance with the intricate gestures of Indian classical dance and the splendor of traditional attire, creating a dreamlike visual effect. This fusion not only enriches the connotation of modern dance but also provides new impetus for the preservation and development of Indian culture.

3.3. Media and platform

The cross-cultural communication of modern dance can not be separated from the support of various media and platforms. International competitions, art festivals and online media have become important channels for modern dance to go global. International events, such as the World Modern Dance Championship, provide a stage for dancers around the world to show their talents and communicate. Art festivals, such as Edinburgh Art Festival and Venice Biennale, promote diversified exchanges and mutual learning of modern dance by inviting modern dance groups from different countries to perform.

The development of online media has given wings to the cross-cultural communication of modern dance. Through the Internet, people can easily watch modern dance performances around the world and learn about the development of modern dance under different cultural backgrounds. At the same time, online media also provides a more convenient way for the promotion and popularization of modern dance, so that more people have the opportunity to get in touch with modern dance and feel its unique artistic charm.

4. Influence of modern dance body aesthetics on cross-cultural communication

4.1. Promote cultural understanding and respect

As an important language of cross-cultural communication, modern dance body aesthetics has unique advantages. Through the dynamic expression of the body, it can cross the language barrier and directly touch people's hearts, thus enhancing the understanding and respect between people with different cultural backgrounds. Modern dance works often contain profound cultural connotations and emotional expressions. When these works are watched by people with different cultural backgrounds, they can stimulate the audience's interest and curiosity in foreign cultures and promote cultural exchange and integration.

Modern dance body aesthetics also emphasizes the freedom of body and the release of personality, which is helpful to break cultural prejudice and stereotype and promote the pluralistic coexistence and respect of culture. On the stage of modern dance, dancers with different body shapes and different cultural backgrounds can find their own expressions, which is the goal of cross-cultural communication.

4.2. Artistic innovation and diversity

Modern dance body aesthetics has stimulated artistic innovation in cross-cultural communication and made important contributions to the diversity of global artistic ecology. When dancers, directors and audiences from different cultural backgrounds get together, the communication and collision between them will often inspire new inspiration and creativity. These ideas are not only reflected in the design of dance movements, but also in music, clothing, lighting and other aspects, thus promoting the continuous innovation and development of modern dance art.

The cross-cultural communication of modern dance body aesthetics also promotes the diversity of global artistic ecology. Through communication and integration, modern dance works from different cultural backgrounds can learn from each other and form their own artistic styles and expressions. This diversity not only enriches the artistic connotation of modern dance, but also provides audiences with more diverse artistic experiences.

4.3. Social issues and public participation

Modern dance body aesthetics also promotes public participation and social dialogue by expressing social issues. As a highly expressive art form, modern dance can often keenly capture the pulse of social changes, reflect social problems through the dynamic expression of the body, and arouse public thinking. For example, some modern dance works pay attention to social issues such as gender equality, environmental protection, racial discrimination, etc., and convey the creator's views and emotions through dance to stimulate the audience's resonance and reflection.

The cross-cultural communication of modern dance body aesthetics also provides a broader space for public participation. By watching modern dance works under different cultural backgrounds, the audience can not only understand the charm and characteristics of foreign cultures, but also participate in cross-cultural exchanges and dialogues to discuss the common problems and challenges faced by mankind. This kind of public participation not only helps to enhance understanding and respect among people with different cultural backgrounds, but also promotes social progress and development.

5. Challenges and countermeasures

Modern dance body aesthetics is facing significant cultural differences and misunderstandings in cross-cultural communication. Because people from different cultural backgrounds have differences in aesthetic concepts, body language and emotional expressions, modern dance works are often difficult to be accurately understood by all audiences in the process of cross-cultural communication. For example, certain body movements or expressions may be regarded as elegant or powerful in one culture, but may be interpreted as weird or offensive in another culture. This cultural difference and misunderstanding not only affects the communication effect of modern dance works, but also may lead to the deepening of cultural conflicts and misunderstandings. In addition, the body aesthetics of modern dance is also faced with language barriers, the challenge of choreography brought by cultural differences, and the different acceptance of the theme and emotion of dance works by different cultures. These problems need our attention in cross-cultural communication and seek effective solutions.

In order to promote the more effective cross-cultural communication of modern dance body aesthetics, this article thinks that the strategy in Figure 1 can be adopted:

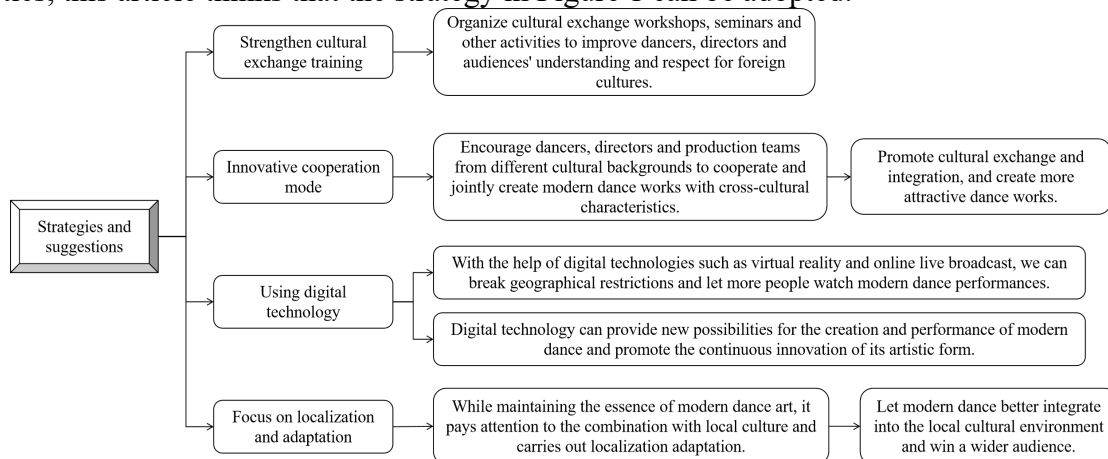

Figure 1 Strategies and suggestions

6. Conclusions

This article mainly discusses the spread path, influence, challenges and countermeasures of modern dance body aesthetics in cross-cultural communication. Through research, it is found that modern dance body aesthetics has played an important role in promoting cultural understanding and respect, artistic innovation and diversity, social issues and public participation. However, in cross-cultural communication, modern dance body aesthetics is also facing cultural differences, misunderstandings and challenges. Therefore, this article puts forward some strategies and suggestions, such as strengthening cultural exchange training, innovating cooperation mode and using digital technology, in order to promote the more effective cross-cultural communication of modern dance body aesthetics. The research results have important practical guiding significance for the development of modern dance, cross-cultural communication and the formulation of cultural and artistic policies.

In the era of globalization, the development trend of modern dance body aesthetics will be more diversified and inclusive. With the increasingly frequent cross-cultural exchanges, modern dance will constantly absorb elements and ideas from different cultures and form more colorful art forms. At the same time, modern dance body aesthetics will also become an important bridge to build a community of human destiny, which will promote understanding and respect between different countries and nations and promote world peace and development through the power of dance.

References

- [1] Wang Yixuan. Post-modernism under the aesthetic characteristics of American "post-modern dance" [J]. Art Garden, 2021,(01):81-84.
- [2] Howlin C, Vicary S, Orgs G. Audiovisual aesthetics of sound and movement in contemporary dance[J]. Empirical Studies of the Arts, 2020, 38(2):191-211.
- [3] Sun Xiaofang. Spatial Composition: Interpretation of Aesthetic Characteristics of Modern Dance Performing Arts [J]. Yuefu Xincheng (Journal of Shenyang Conservatory of Music), 2023, 41(4):160-164.
- [4] He Huaming. On the aesthetic integration of modern dance art and the characteristics of the times [J]. Art Education, 2022(5):101-104.
- [5] You Di. Unique aesthetic features in modern dance art [J]. Art Jian, 2021(20):119-120.
- [6] Puthumana G N, Puthumana G. Cultural identity and aesthetics in Indian folk dance Thidambu Nritham: A performance outlook[J]. International Journal of Cultural and Art Studies, 2021, 5(1):38-44.
- [7] Han Ji. On the aesthetic characteristics of modern dance art [J]. Art Evaluation, 2019,(18):71-72.
- [8] Li Bingchen. China folk dance and the integration of modern elements [J]. Drama House, 2023(35):112-114.
- [9] Liu Xiaoli. China folk dance and modern dance elements fusion analysis [J]. Art Jian, 2021(3):135-136.
- [10] Peng H, Li J, Hu H, et al. Feature fusion based automatic aesthetics evaluation of robotic dance poses[J]. Robotics and Autonomous Systems, 2019, 111:99-109.